Michigan State Seeks Upset Of Buckeyes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Michigan State, the Big Ten's lame duck basketball champion, will see what it can do today in delaying Ohio State's rush for the championship.

The Spartans (5-5) have been eliminated from the race but they could like nothing better than to lump Ohio State's hopes of going through the campaign undefeated.

The Buckeyes have won 10 conference games including a 111-79 triumph over Michigan State in Columbus. It was the worst basketball loss in MSU history.

The Spartans will have little going for them aside from the home court advantage—something which has failed to bother Ohio State. The Buckeyes ripped Illinois at Illinois 109-81 Monday and the Illini hadn't previously lost at home this season.

Ohio State could clinch the title today if they defeat Michigan State and Indiana should lose at Iowa. The Hoosiers (6-3) are the only team with less than four losses.

Even if Indiana should win, Ohio State would clinch a tie for the crown by defeating Michigan State after the MSU game. Ohio State's home to Wisconsin next Saturday before winding up the campaign at Indiana Feb. 29 and at Minnesota March 5.

Other games today find Illinois (5-4) at Wisconsin (1-8), Purdue (5-5) at Northwestern (5-4), and Michigan (6-3) at Minnesota (7-4) in a regionally televised matinee.
