

Pitching is Ross concern

By BOB MARKER

Reporting for The News-Messenger

Pitching in fast pitch softball is the key ingredient.

Ross High School had that ingredient last season and it carried the Little Giants to the Class AAA district tournament finals. This year, it's an ingredient still missing on Coach Christy Holland's team.

Six letter winners return to the Little Giants, but gone via graduation is Kim Schutt, whose right arm helped carry the Little Giants to an 18-6 record.

"Pitching is one of my major concerns," Holland said. "We have three people who can throw, but if they had as much control as they have speed, we would be set."

The three hurlers are seniors Lora Almaguer and Taunya Downing and sophomore Kim White, all returning letter winners.

While Holland is concerned with his pitching, the Ross defense is a bright point.

"We have everyone back, except at third base," the Ross coach said.

Aimee LeJeune, a junior, will be at first with Downing at second when she is not pitching. Almaguer will be at shortstop, also when not pitching.

Stepping into the third base slot will be Sue Tousignant, Holland said. Julie Schaaf will be the utility person in the infield.

In the outfield, Shannon Watts, a sophomore, will be in left with junior Heidi Lehmann in center. Carol Tousignant will be in right when White is pitching. Also in the outfield is letter winner Angie Flores.

Flores, however, and senior Shelly Leggett, also a returning letter winner, are in the catching picture.

"Defensively, we are in good shape," Holland said.

"We have a versatile team," the Ross coach continued, "and we do have a lot of experience, which makes it nice."

"If the pitching comes around, I am optimistic we will have a good season."

Ross opens the season Friday, hosting Bellevue in a 4:30 p.m. game.

White keys Lady Giants' twinbill sweep

News-Messenger Reports

MARION — Ross, Kim White and the defense were two-for-two Saturday in a high school softball double-header against Harding.

White pitched both games as Ross won 5-4 and 8-7, and the Little Giants' defense did not commit an error in the twinbill.

"They were both good games," Ross Coach Christy Holland said quietly.

White's feat, although not that unusual in softball, was the first time in several years that it has happened at Ross.

"It was warm," Holland described

Saturday, "and Kim said she felt pretty good and that she could pitch the second game."

She did and the twin wins raised Ross's season to 12-10 and took them a game over .500 in the Buckeye Conference at 3-2. White scattered 11 hits in the first game and held the Presidents to seven in the nightcap.

Lora Almaguer's two-run single in the first inning of the opener gave Ross a lead it never lost. Ross had nine hits, all singles, one by each of the nine starters.

The Little Giants scored single runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings. Harding scored twice in the bottom of the sixth to close to within a run at 5-4.

Ross scored five runs in the first inning of the second game and led 6-0 after two. The Little Giants added single runs in the fifth and sixth. Harding plated four in the third, one in the sixth and two in the bottom of the seventh.

Shelly Leggett tripled and singled twice to pace Ross's 12-hit attack. Julie Schaaf tripled and singled for a Ross run. Aimee LeJeune doubled and drove in a pair of runs. Almaguer and Sue Tousignant drove in two runs apiece.
