

Ross drops Girls Athletic Association

A change of the times in girls athletics has been recognized by the Ross High School staff and Fremont Board of Education.

The board voted Wednesday night to cancel the Girls Athletic Association (GAA) and replace it with an organization, comparable to a co-educational intramurals program. The recommendation for the board action was made by high school principal Richard Butdorf and GAA adviser Susi Shiets.

Miss Shiets said participation in GAA has dropped considerably in the past few years because of the switch in interest among girls from recreational activity to varsity sports.

She said they have tried the last three years to run GAA, but it is no longer economical to do so.

In approving the recommendation, board members Don Saam and Margaret Weaver commended the high school staff for having the foresight to change with the times. Mrs. Weaver said she often criticizes education for just adding things, and said she likes to see things which are outmoded to be dropped.

Reserves pace Ross

Ross had to call out the reserves Thursday night and it paid off for Ross girls basketball coach Jolyn Smith. Sophomores Roxie Price and Tracy Hull played key roles in leading the Little Giants girls to a 43-36 overtime win over Willard in the season opener for Ross.

The two sophomores helped the Ross team overcome a 19-3 deficit after one period in the game.

"They turned it around for us," said Mrs. Smith as she referred to the work of Miss Price and Miss Hull, who had played two quarters of the reserve game.

Miss Price tossed in 10 points to lead the Ross varsity but it was a shot by Mara Tolhurst in the last few seconds that tied the game at 33-33, sending the game into the extra session. Miss Price popped in two buckets in the three minute overtime and Sara Sherick contributed a bucket and two free throws to hand the game to Ross.

Willard had jumped ahead of the Ross team on the strength of six long distance bombs by Becky Jackson in the first eight minutes. Miss Jackson, however, was held scoreless the rest of the game but did lead all scorers with the dozen points.

Miss Sherick was second behind Miss Price on the Ross squad with eight points.

In the reserve game, Martha O'Neill scored five points and three others dropped in four points apiece as the Ross JVs rolled to an easy 29-7 win.
